motivation studies were used in this article

WHAT DOES IT FIND?

- Classroom climate is an important factor affecting learners' motivation
- Classroom climate should be built on trust and support; a competitive and cutthroat atmosphere should be avoided
- Student interaction is the key element in determining student motivation
- Task motivation is crucial in increasing learners' language ability
- Understanding different backgrounds of learners can help teachers motivate learners based on their unique identities
- Local teaching-learning context is the point of departure for reflecting on learners' motivation

HOW CAN I USE THE FINDINGS IN MY TEACHING?

- Teachers can promote authentic language learning using a project-based, scenario-based, or problem-based approach
- School-based or class-based curriculum materials can be developed which address topics of interest to learners
